“Swansea University has established itself as an internationally renowned research-intensive University working with some of the world’s biggest companies. The new Science and Innovation Bay Campus will mark the next step in the University’s journey in becoming a world-leading institution promoting continuous innovation that is central to the vibrancy of the knowledge economy of Wales and the regeneration of the region”

Professor Richard B Davies
Vice Chancellor
Swansea University

Fabian Way is evolving into an important business corridor just off the M4 motorway. It is the chosen location for Swansea University’s second campus, a £450 million development by St. Modwen, at its 65 acre site. The new Bay Campus will provide educational facilities for over 5,000 students, supported by high quality research, innovation and education facilities, including the iconic Great Hall which will provide auditorium space for 800 and a facility for the students, staff, business and the public to enjoy.

The area is also fast developing into a creative hub, with major and independent TV and film companies favouring the County Borough as the backdrop for international and globally renowned productions. The Bay Studios on Fabian Way opened in 2012 and is set to boost the local economy and wider region in terms of job creation and spend across South Wales.

Bay Studios has the potential to become one of Europe’s largest indoor film facilities.

“The Bay Studios provide enough space to base everything at one site - a tremendous advantage for a production this size. There is also easy access to filming locations across South Wales, and the necessary experience and expertise needed in terms of businesses and people.”

Executive Producer for ‘Da Vinci’s Demons’
